Description of Worms, and the symptoms by which they are known.
Worms which infest the human body are chiefly of four kinds viz.—The round worm; the Ascarides or small maw-worm; the Cucurbitina or short flat white worm; and lastly, the Tænia or tape-worm, so called from its resemblance to tape. It is often many yards long and is full of joints. It is most hurtful and most difficult to remove.

Among the symptoms attending worms are—disagreeable breath, especially in the morning; bad and corrupted gums itching in the nose, and about the seat of convulsions, epileptic fits, and sometimes privation of speech; starting and grinding of the teeth in sleep; irregular appetite, sometimes loathing food and sometimes voracious; purging with slimy and fetid stools; vomiting; large and hard belly; pains and sickness at the stomach; slow fever with small and irregular pulse; a dry cough; excessive thirst; sometimes pale and unhealthy countenance, and sometimes the face bloated and flushed.

Persons afflicted with any of the above symptoms should have immediate recourse to Hamilton's Worm Destroying Lozenges, which have been constantly attended with success in all complaints similar to those above described.

A dose of this medicine given occasionally during the warm season, will effectually prevent the vomiting and purging of children—a dreadful disorder which annually destroys thousands of the infant part of our citizens. It is likewise the mildest and most certain remedy known, and has restored to health and strength a great number who in an advanced stage of this fatal complaint. Particular and plain instructions are given for every part of the necessary treatment in such cases.

Children generally take this medicine with eagerness; having a pleasing appearance, and an agreeable taste.

The Persian Lotion operates mildly, without impeding the natural insensible perspiration which is essential to health, yet its effects are speedy and permanent, rendering the skin delicately soft and smooth, and improving the complexion.

SAURDAY, SEPTEMBER 13, 1817.

From the Bell, Federal Republican.
SONG—YE SONS OF THE CHASE.
Awake from your slumbers, ye sons of the chase.

The day star is mounting on high;
Oh leave for a moment your Chloe's embrace.

And welcome the dawn of the sky;
Sweet Echo has risen and gone to her bow.

Where sighing she waits for the dawn;
Then up, jovial hunters, and hail the young hour.

That ushers the glimpse of the morn.
Hark forward—hark forward—hark forward away!

No sportsman can sleep after dawning of day.

The hounds are impatient their couple to break,
And dash from the meadows the dew.

As fleet as wind they wing'd Reynard's track,
Whom fancy now holds to their view.

Then rouse from your slumbers, ye sons of the chase.

The spirit of morn is on high;
Vanquish'd night to young day is now giving place.

And Aurora's blush in the sky;
Hark forward—hark forward—hark forward away!

No sportsman can sleep after break of the day.

The hawk is preparing to ride on the wind.

Above the pale shroud of the night,
That now with the dawn is so closely combin'd.

Its gloom is entangled with light—
Then hither haste, sportsmen, ere day is full born.

And witness the struggles of love,
How sweet are the efforts that bring in the morn.

And crown her with blushes above:
Hark forward—hark forward—hark forward away!

No sportsman can sleep after dawning of day.

CLAUDIAN.

From the London Monthly Visitor.

A FACT
Relating to the Marquis de Bouille.

Some years previous to the late revolution in France, when the nobility yet held their almost regal honors, a Mr., a young Englishman of fortune, who was on his travels, and stopped in Paris, used to spend much of his time at the hotel of the Marquis de Bouille—his hospitality and personal accomplishments, won far on the esteem of Mr.; and in one French family, even in the heart of the most dissolute court in Europe, he beheld unobscured happiness, conjugal purity! The personal graces of the marchioness, though in the wane of 40 years, yet gave loveliness to the sentiments of a mind that was only to be known, to be adored. She was admired and esteemed by Mr., as her husband was revered and loved. When this truly noble pair quitted Paris, for the country, they requested their guests speedily to follow them. Mr. had been some weeks in Paris after the departure of his illustrious friends, and was preparing to comply with their wishes, when he received a letter from the marquis, written in the utmost consternation and anguish of mind. He had lost the wife of his bosom—she was then lying dead in the castle, after having endured the pains of a short, but a rapid illness—she was at peace; but for him, his grief must be eternal as his love.

This intelligence surprised and affected Mr., and eager to console his suffering friend, he immediately set off for the chateau. When he arrived at the village, which lay at the foot of the hill on which the castle was situated, instead of the stillness of sympathetic sorrow marking every countenance for the loss of one whose almost soul was charity—instead of this decent tribute to the virtuous dead—the bells rang and the peasants were assembled, dancing, singing and exhibiting every feature of festivity. Amazed and shocked, he inquired what it meant? The general reply was—"The marchioness is come to life!" Bewildered with hope he hardly cherished, he hastened to the chateau, and there was received with open arms by the happy marquis. He led him to the chamber of his amiable wife; who thanked Mr. with tears of gratitude, for the consolation his friendship had intended her Lord. After the first hurried obser-uations were over, Mr. felt his emotions subside to tranquillity; he enquired the reason of this blissful change. The marchioness replied to him nearly in these terms.

"My illness was sudden and alarming, and the marquis summoned several physicians to attend me. All their exertions seemed to fail, and they declared that there was no hope—but consented to remain in the room till I breathed my last. I took leave of my family, and in bidding my husband adieu forever, a sudden convulsion seized me—and I expired in his arms. I fell back on my bed pale and motionless; and he was torn by absolute force from the apartment. The physicians then advanced, and looking at me declared that I was dead. I was stiff, and cold as marble, and laid in my shroud upon my couch to be ready for interment. For this part of my narration, I am indebted to my women. In obedience to our religion, and in honor of my rank, the room was darkened, hung with black, and lighted with wax lights; and the antilems for the dead were chaunted morning and evening around my bed. At last the day came when I was to be committed to the earth. My husband, who had been detained from the sight of my corpse, hearing that I was to be removed, broke from his room and flying to the door of my apartment, insisted upon seeing me once more. In vain he implored, his attendants in obedience to the physicians, held him fast—but his grief was stronger than their strength; and with a sudden exertion he burst from their hold, and rushing into the chamber, flung himself upon my bosom, exclaiming—"My wife! my wife! my dear wife, they shall not tear thee from me!" At these words I raised myself, and clasped him in my arms: he fainted, by the assistance of the faculty he was soon recovered; and I removed to a warm bed, which quickly restored me to my former self. What I have told you is extraordinary—but what I have yet to tell, yet strikes me with terror. When I appeared to expire, I suppose I swooned; for I have no recollection of any thing, till my senses seemed to awake at the strains of fine music. I found myself stretched on my couch, unable to open my eyes, to move, or to articulate sound. The voices of the choristers chilled me with dread; but when I heard them proceed for hours in the solemnity, and my women, who sat around me, discoursing of my death, and intended burial—God knows what were my horrors! the conviction that I should be buried alive, with all my senses contemplating the scene, almost drove me mad: yet I was incapable of expressing even any sign that I existed. In this state of distraction and terror was my mind when I heard my husband's voice at my door; when I heard his struggles—his eloquent grief—Oh! how my soul was torn with agony! It appeared ready to burst my body; but when my dear Lord threw himself upon my breast, and in all the torture of anguish called upon my name, and strained me to his heart—it caused such a tempest in my soul—such a revulsion in my whole frame—that I felt the will, and the next moment had the power to grasp him in my arms—the rest you already know.

This relation is a fact. Mr. is now in London. I am not certain of the present residence of the Marquis; but his late work on the French revolution will give him celebrity wherever he goes.

A clergyman travelling a road that led from a noted tavern, overtook a man on horse back, who had treated himself so kindly with good stuff, that his body was subject to a constant vibration from side to side: for the sake of good company, he made exertion to keep his horse along side of the clergyman's, to the great hazard of losing his seat on the saddle.

"Friend," said the clergyman, "whoever you be, you seem to be very happy." "I hope," said the man, "I shall be happy in the next world; I know you very well, though you are unacquainted with me—you are the very man who converted me."

"Very possible," said the clergyman, "and it looks like some of my bungling work, which I shall be obliged to do over again."

Dr. Yinchinelli, at Pauda, has published an essay "On the reason why people use the right hand in preference to the left." He will not allow custom or imitation to be the cause; but affirms that the left arm cannot be in violent and continual motion, without causing pain in the left side because there is the seat of the heart and of the arterial system. Nature herself therefore, compels man to make use of the right hand.

ALEXANDRIA:
SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 13, 1817.

A SPECIMEN OF BIOGRAPHY.

A. B. was born in the year—(no matter what). His parents were—(no matter who). He had a bold, grinning countenance, with staring eyes. Frisked about most turbulently in his nurse's arms—said TA when he was bid—and every body pronounced him to be a sweet, pretty, interesting baby.

After this, he began to walk alone, and either stamped along, or crawled from one end of the room to the other—uttered RA and MA, and several other words of equal difficulty, with vast distinctness, and contracted his brow into such a look of sagacity, that every one declared he was a philosopher ready made, and a sweet, pretty, and positively interesting creature; in short, as Mr. Smirk says, "quite a jewel of a boy."

He was then sent to school, where he learned his letters so well, that in two years he could spell and put together; in another year, he could read a lesson in the spelling-book, and when stimulated by a slice of cake, could repeat it to his papa & mamma and their visiting friends by heart. Even now he began to show his high sense of independence—for being in the saying of a lesson, stopped by his father for pronouncing the letters A, A, X.

"TIT—he maintained his ground—insisted that it was all mere prejudice in his father to say that A, A, X, spelled TAM: that he had full as good a right as his father to know what it was, and to pronounce it as he pleased, and that it was and should be TIT and not TAM. So stamping his foot and knitting his brow, to prove the orthodoxy of his opinion, the father gave it up to him with a smile of approbation; and mamma, hugging him to her bosom, declared that he would be—may that he was already, an accomplished philosopher and citizen, and a vastly brave fellow.

He then went to a superior school—(I beg the schoolmaster's pardon, I should have said academy—school being a low, vulgar word, and getting obsolete) where, by the help of the labor-saving books of the schools, dignified with the titles of "Preceptors," "Teachers," "Assistants," &c. &c. he became all at once an historian, a politician, and an orator; and in order to remove every impediment that could possibly prevent his figuring away in those characters, or obstruct the display of his genius, he was, by public exhibition, gradually relieved from the little diffidence which the fond partiality of his parents had left alive in his bosom; so that he could without the least emotion of bashfulness deliver the story of Lavinia, from Thompson's Seasons, as easily before one thousand spectators, as before one. He was now a monstrous clever lad. And mamma taking it into her head that he would look vastly pretty in naval or military uniform, took means to bedight him in a suit, which, like the wig of the auctioneer in Foote's comedy of the Minor, was neither one nor the other, but a something between both. In this he strutted about, while every lip that he saw moving seemed to be hallooing "Here!" in his ear; and he almost forgot his lesson and his books in profound reveries respecting the particular acquirements in which his excellence most consisted.—Whether he was most conspicuous as an orator, a politician, a philosopher, a logician, an arithmetician, an actor or a poet. He was now said to be a most promising youth—nay, papa and mamma themselves had the modesty to acknowledge it: who then could deny it?

He was next sent to college; his journey to which had like to be delayed by a trifling accident. Mamma, when she had furnished her Hopeful with a suit of uniform, thought it would be unbecoming a good mother to make him a Hero by halves, and therefore bought him a dirk, from which moment he took great delight in talking of duels. The night before his intended departure for college, he went, in the elation of his heart, with a party of young whipper-snappers like himself, to the theatre. More intent upon showing themselves off than seeing the play, they rushed up and down the house from place to place, talking aloud and tramping upon the ladies' dresses, as they saw done by many of the grown-up blackguards who annoy our public places; till at last being rebuked, our hero drew his dirk and stabbed a gentleman. The consequences of the wound being doubtful, he was taken into custody, and it was naturally supposed that he would be committed to prison till the wounded man's life was out of danger; and indeed so he ought to have been; but the magistrate thought, or pretended to think otherwise; and in consideration that the offender was but a mere boy—that it was only a childish frolic—that the child was drunk at the time of committing the offence, and above all that his father was a friend and acquaintance of the magistrate, he was liberated on giving bail in a very small sum of money; and our new fledged hero proceeded to college with the addition to his other glories of having commenced at least the trade of an assassin.

The army court martial, directed to assemble in this city, convened yesterday: present all the members except one. Colonel King is president of the court. SAMUEL WILCOX, Esq. of Philadelphia, has been appointed the judge advocate.

The state of Connecticut (says the Boston Daily Advertiser of the 4th inst.) is entirely out of debt, having in the treasury the means for paying all outstanding claims, and besides possesses a fund, including the school fund, amounting to one million nine hundred and forty-eight thousand three hundred and seventy-one dollars and forty-five cents. This is a decisive indication of the prudence with which the pecuniary affairs of that state have been managed.

Extract of a letter from a respectable gentleman in St. John's, Porto Rico, addressed to his friend in Philadelphia. "St. John's, Porto Rico, Aug. 19.

"The last sale of sugar here was at $10.50, clear of duty. The intendment has lately added six cents per barrel to the former duty—which on the article from the United States, is now $4.50 per barrel. LATEST FROM AMELIA.

Extract of a letter from a respectable gentleman in St. Mary's to another in this city, dated August 31, 1817.

"I went to Amelia Island yesterday to see how our new neighbors progressed. They appear to be in high spirits, and wish much for an attack from the Spaniards. The Morgiana, and another brig, mounting 16 guns and 75 men, arrived yesterday from New-York. The guns are men for the Morgiana are coming on in a brig and sloop, which were supposed to be of the number of vessels in sight last evening. (Two brigs, two schooners, and one sloop.) Mr. Hubbard, late sheriff of New-York, told me bonds had to be given to the amount of 10,000 dollars that they should not take any arms on board, and not more than 25 men, which number was thought sufficient to navigate the vessel. Large reinforcements are expected as soon as the sickly season is over, when they will proceed against Augustine. A proclamation, declaring East and West Florida blockaded after the 15th of September, is published by commander Taylor; and will be enforced by the naval force of the republic of the Floridas. I had some conversation with general McGregor. He is certainly a very gentlemanly man, and has much the appearance of a military character. He speaks confidently of succeeding in the conquest of the country before the month of December."

Another letter to the editors says, "The town of Ferrandina is incorporated under general McGregor's authority, and has a mayor and alderman, who make municipal regulations. There is a police office, at which every person must report when they arrive, and procure a passport when about to depart, for which they have to pay fifty cents. A printing office has also been established; and national money, something similar to the change bills of Savannah, put in circulation, signed by McGregor. The Patriots at this time can repulse five hundred men easily."

In the town of Calais, in the county of Washington, and District of Maine, there are now living, as follows:

Two great grand parents, four grand parents, three fathers, three mothers, three husbands, three wives, six children, four grand children, two great grand children. The whole number being only eight persons. One husband and wife have been parents of eighteen children, (including three pair of twins) sixteen of whom are now living.

Another distressing fire at Sag Harbor.

On Monday last about 11 o'clock A. M. a copper shop standing near the centre of the place, and contiguous to the thickest part of the village was discovered on fire.

Being filled with empty casks, and other combustible material, it was, in a few moments perfectly enveloped in flames. The ringing of the bell and of fire was soon heard in every direction, men, women and children, with pails and buckets in their hands, hastened to the scene. But all their efforts save the building were to no purpose. Large and valuable dwelling house, containing near the shop, in spite of the great exertions soon began to blaze. All attempts of extinguishing it were vain. The fire being dry and the wind strong from the north, it was generally believed, that the remaining part of the place which has escaped the ravages of the conflagration, would be unavoidably laid in ashes.

All the houses in the direction of the flames were lined with people with buckets in their hands, ready to quench the incipient fires, as they fell upon the many of which were covered with carpets—but notwithstanding the vigilance and activity, a number of the houses, barns and stores, took several times, which, with great difficulty was extinguished. It was indeed a scene of terror and confusion—every effort made to clear the houses and stores, their most valuable contents, which all appearance, must in a few minutes lie in smoking ashes.

But at the moment when all was up for lost, and nothing but inevitable destruction seemed to await the place, wind veered east and gave the fire more favorable direction. A most interposition of divine providence never witnessed.

The house consumed was a very valuable building, belonging to Messrs. and Louis Howell; and was occupied by Mr. G. Hathaway and Mr. Conant, the principal part of their families, &c. The cooper's shop contained many new casks belonging to Messrs. Howell, all of which were entirely destroyed. To prevent the progress of the fire, another building, belonging to Austin, was demolished.

It is with pleasure we state that a person was injured, though Mr. Howell was obliged to jump from a window the second story of a house on fire.

How are this people pressed under repeated, but deserved judgments? We cannot but hope that a generous benevolent public will remember this day of calamity.

ANTIQUÉ GLASSES:
Discovered in Hamburg, Niagara New York.

An opinion is entertained by well informed persons in the U. S. that this country has at some remote period, been inhabited by a civilized people prior to its settlement or subjugation by the savages; and to the many evidences furnished to strengthen this opinion, the remains of fortifications (tumuli), may be added the discovery of a number of pieces of glass, of singular workmanship lately made in Hamburg, Niagara city.

I have been favored with an opportunity of examining one of these glasses, on the authority of my informant, and am enabled to remark, that they were taken about two months ago from an excavation in the town of Hamburg; and they were found deposited in an earthen pot. Contiguous to this pot, were found a skull and some other bones of the human frame. This barrow, or sepulchre, is situated in a field, and is an unexcavated part of the town. Several old trees are growing upon it, and at the time this excavation was made, some of the bones were judged to be upwards of two thousand years old.

The glass which I had an opportunity to examine, (and I am informed that all alike) is in the form of a large bell-shaped bead; consisting of a transparent green glass, covered with opaque coarse red enamel. Its length is about an inch; its greatest width and a half tenth of an inch; and the tube 2.10th of an inch. The circle of the bore of this tube is a circle, of the size of a large needle, rating the tube from one end to the other. The enamel which covers the transparent glass, appears to have been ornamented with painting, in figures resembling a spindle, or two interlocking circles; but they are hardly perceptible, as the bead appears to have been considerably worn. The circumstance most indicative of the making of this bead, is, a special enamelling that has been performed on the external and internal surface of the tube, previous to its being covered with the coarse red enamel. This enamel is white, and as the external face of the tube was not smooth, the parallel striae, or veins, exhibit the appearance of a white vein between green tube and red enamel. The melting appears to me to have been not by melting on any vitreous composition, as is practised at the present time, but by the effect of calcination for a long time in a low red heat. This, it will deprive glass, especially green, of its transparency; and render its face white to a certain depth.

The composition of the tube of glass, I have judged to be simply a sand and an alkali; probably with the addition of lime, or vegetable matter, is hard, and will not receive such a lead glass; and I can lead from this circumstance, that the lead in the composition. Its color is also, owing to the impurity of the employed, like the common window bottle glass; and is probably caused by a minute portion of iron combined with the state of an oxyd with the sand alkali.

The red enamel covering the tube, and the pot in which these glasses were found, to have been constructed of similar materials, as they differ very little in color, texture, or other external character. Probably a very fusible brick-clay, high impregnated with the oxyd of iron, pulverized fragments of green glass, the principle ingredients of both the earthen pot is manifestly constructed of different materials from those employed for brown pottery at the present period. It is a more imperishable substance, of a close texture, and vitreous appearance.

I shall not presume to speculate in opinions which discoveries of this interesting nature are calculated to create; but may however here be added, that the fabrication of these glasses would suppose a perfection in the arts which none of the Indian tribes inhabiting this country at the period of its discovery, had arrived to. That if introduced by the French from Canada in their communications with Indians inhabiting the western part of this state, there would hardly have been a sufficient time elapsed between that period and this, for the growth of such trees as are growing on the barrow or mound from which these relics were taken. And that if not introduced by the French at that period alluded to, we must refer their manufacture back to every remote date; and one, on which Indian tradition is wholly silent.

THE subscriber offers for sale his farm, called "CULLINS," situated in the county of Fauquier, on Kettle Run, and adjoining the lands of Messrs. For the prevention and cure of BILIOUS and MALIGNANT FEVERS is recommended

HAHN'S ANTI-BILIOUS PILLS

THIS Medicine has been attended with a degree of success highly grateful to the inventor's feelings in several parts of the West Indies and in the Southern and Middle States, particularly in New-York Philadelphia Baltimore Petersburg Richmond Norfolk Edenton Wilmington Charleston and Savannah. The testimony of a number of persons in each of the above places can be adduced, who have reason to believe that a timely use of this salutary remedy has under Providence preserved their lives when in the most alarming circumstances.

Facts of this conclusive nature speak more in favour of a medicine than columns of pompous eulogy founded on mere assertion.

It is not indeed presumptuously proposed as an infallible cure, but the inventor has every possible reason that can result from extensive experience for believing that a dose of these Pills taken once in every two weeks during the prevalence of our bilious fevers, will prove an infallible preventative; and further, that in the earlier stages of those diseases their use will very generally succeed in restoring health, and frequently in cases esteemed desperate and beyond the power of common remedies.

The operation of these pills is perfectly mild, so as to be used with safety by persons in every situation and of every age. They are excellently adapted to carry off superfluous bile and prevent its morbid secretions—to restore and amend the appetite—to produce a free perspiration and thereby prevent colds which are often of fatal consequences. A dose never fails to remove a cold if taken on its first appearance: they are celebrated for removing habitual costiveness—sickness at the stomach and severe head-ache—and ought to be taken by all persons on a change of climate.

They have been found remarkably efficacious in preventing and curing disorders attendant on long voyages, and should be procured and carefully preserved for use by every seaman.

Lee's Infallible Ague and Fever Drops For the cure of agues, remittent and intermittent fevers.

Hamilton's Worm-destroying Lozenges,

Which have cured an immense number of persons of both sexes of every age and in every situation of various dangerous complaints arising from worms and from obstructions or foulness in their stomach and bowels.

This medicine bears no analogy whatever to others of similar title so commonly complained of as operating with violence; on the contrary a particular excellence of this remedy is its being suited to every age and constitution. It contains nothing but what is perfectly innocent & is so mild in its operation that it cannot injure the most delicate pregnant lady or the tenderest infant of a week old should no worms exist in the body; but will without pain or griping cleanse the stomach and bowels of whatever is foul or offensive, and thereby prevent the production of worms and many fatal disorders. The lozenges are particularly efficacious in carrying off all gross humours and eruptions, feverish and bilious complaints, and are the safest and mild est purgative that can be used on any occasion.

Description of Worms, and the symptoms by which they are known

Worms which infest the human system are chiefly of four kinds viz.—The Ascarides or large round worm; the Cucurbitina or small maw-worm; the Cucurbitina or short flat white worm; and lastly, the Tænia or tape-worm, so called from its resemblance to tape. It is often many yards long and is full of joints. It is most hurtful and most difficult to remove.

Among the symptoms attending worms are—disagreeable breath, especially in the morning; bad and corrupted smelling in the nose, and about the mouth; convulsions, epileptic fits, and sometimes privation of speech; starting and grinding of the teeth in sleep; irregular appetite. Sometimes loathing food and sometimes voracious; purging with slimy and fetid stools; vomiting; large and labile belly; pains and sickness at the stomach; slow fever with small and regular pulse; a dry cough; excessive thirst; sometimes pale and unhealthy countenance, and sometimes the face bloated and flushed.

Persons afflicted with any of the above symptoms should have immediate recourse to Hamilton's Worm Destroying Lozenges, which have been constantly attended with success in all complaints similar to those above described.

A dose of this medicine given occasionally during the warm season, will effectually prevent the vomiting and purging of children—a dreadful disorder which annually destroys thousands of the infant part of our citizens. It is likewise the mildest and most certain remedy known, and has restored to health a strength a great number who in an advanced stage of this fatal complaint. Particular and plain instructions are given for every part of the necessary treatment in such cases.

Children generally take this medicine with eagerness; having a pleasing appearance, and an agreeable taste.

Hamilton's Essence and Extract of Mustard.

A safe and effectual remedy for rheumatism gout palsy sprains and bruises white swellings old strains and relations numbness and weakness of the neck pains of the side head ache swollen frozen limbs and every similar complaint. It prevents chilblains or chapped hands, and the ill effects of getting wet or damp in the feet.

The Genuine Persian Lotion,

So celebrated among the fashionable throughout Europe, is an invaluable cosmetic, perfectly innocent and safe, free from corrosive and repellent mineral the basis of other lotions, and of unparalleled efficacy in removing blemishes of the face and skin freckles pimples inflammatory redness scurfs tetters ring worms sunburns prickly heat &c.
